Wool. Washing at the Tank's Stream.—

An omission has occurred in the advertisement of Mr. Chapman's property, by Mr. Stubbs, quite unintentional. It respects the excellence of the water at the end of Little George-street, for "wool-washing," where some score, or mere, bales may be seen undergoing that process every day. Those who use it say, that the water possesses all those peculiar alkalige-nous combined properties which, whilst it cleanses easily all sorts of impurity, leaves undisturbed the yolky softeness, which alone makes a fleece marketable. If this be so, as the use seems to justify, and immediately at the rear of Mr. Chapman's weol-shed and stores, besides, it remains for wool sorters and the public to compute the value between them, at the day of safe.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1845. Sworn to no master, of no sect am I."

DR. LANG'S LETTER TO LORD STANLEY.

THE indefatigable Dr. LANG, having no longer a vent for his political electricity through the columns of his Observer-now, alas! no more—has just published a pam-phlet, bearing the title of 'A Letter to the Right Honorable Lord STANLEY, Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies; occasioned by certain observa-tions in the Speech of His Excellency Sir GEORGE GIPPS, on proroguing the Legisla-tive Council, on the 30th December, 1844. The Doctor having politely favoured us with a copy, common civility has led us to read his letter all through; and comon civility requires, no doubt, that we should take some notice of it in our

Without questioning this gentleman's abilities as a writer, we must confess we are so deficient in taste as not to rank amongst his admirers. His compositions are usually distinguished by certain qua lities which belong neither to the useful, the elegant, nor the true. We allude not to his style, which, though frequently hold and nervous, is often spoiled by a quaint mannerism; nor to his political senti-ments, some of which we think right, and others wrong. The faults we speak of may be thus classified : - First, an excessive personal vanity, which is constantly obtruding itself in all his effusions, written or oral, lauding and magnifying his own dear self as the best of men and most invaluable of colonists. Secondly, an arrogant sitting in judgment upon men's motives, lavishly bepraising those of his own clique, and fiercely condemning those of "all and sundry" his opponents or dissentients. Thirdly, a eas of assertion which often betrays into inaccuracies - indicates want of due reverence for truth-and backs from a man's usefulness, whatever may be the ardour of his zeal, the intensity of his labours, or the brilliancy of his talents. Zeal, industry, and talent, in the cause of his adopted country, can hardly be denied to Dr. Land by his warmer enemies: no more than can his vanity denied by his warmest friends.

The pamphlet before us has fewer of these characteristic faults than most of the DOCTOR'S productions. It seems to be sincere in its purpose, and the purpose is followed up with an earnestness which permits of few digressions. So absorbed s the writer in the subject he treats of, that, strange to say, he almost forgets to abuse his opponents, and stranger still almost forgets to compliment himself Almost, but not quite. He tells Lord Stanley that "for upwards of twenty-one years — and during the whole of that period—he (not Lord STANLEY, but Dr. LANG.) has homestly exerted himself in various ways to pro-mote the intellectual and moral advancement of the colony, esteeming no per-sonal hardship too great, and no personal acrifice too costly, to ensure the attainnent of so desirable an object." this been spoken to Dr. Lang by a friend, it might have seemed ulsome; but being spoken of Dr. Lang by Dr. Lang, it is The Doctor, indeed, assures Lord STANLEY several times that he (not, we repeat, the oble Loan, but the learned Doctor,) is an honest man;" and he fails not, for he hundredth, possibly the thousandth time, to hold up to the admiration of the world his relinquishment, in the ever nemorable year 1842—memorable for this act of more than Roman or Grecian ong received from the Treasury, as the enior Presbyterian minister in this colony, thereby anticipating the somewhat similar movement of the Free Church of Scotland fteen months thereafter."

The object of this letter-to which, with these slight exceptions, the author, as we have said, keeps close—is to prove to Lord STANLEY, first, that the closing passage of the Governor's speech on proroguing the Legislative Council, " signifies that the alterations in the constitution of the coony, which the Council prays for in the Addresses referred to, are revolu-tionary in their character, and that those who ask for them are disaffected and disloyal men;" and secondly, to attempt "the vindication of those who are thus most undeservedly and unjustly Candid readers will here peraccused." ceive, that the letter-writer sets out with one of his characteristic fallacies. The passage in the Governor's speech simply expresses His Excellency's opinion, that nany of the demands of the Council are such as neither will nor can be granted, unless it be the pleasure of HER MAJESTY and Parliament fundamentally and entirely to alter the relations in which the country now stands to the British empire. But it by no means follows, that because such is His Excellency's opinion, His Excellency therefore intends to brand with disaffection and disloyalty all who hold opinions to the contrary. This own book; but since we are not aware that Sir GEORGE GIPPS is so prone as Dr. LANG to infer wicked from mistaken opinions, we see no reason to doubt that whilst His Excel-LENCY thought the demands of the Council could not be all complied with, he at least gave them credit for having emanated from loyal hearts, through erroneous

The author begins his argument by defining what he calls " the grand political heresy" of the colonial system of Great Britain: namely-" that British colonies for Sydney direct

The Lord Petre, Charlotte, Fanny Connell, and Alligator, were advertised at Hongkong on the 30th October for Manila, and the Syy, Captain Hart, for Sydney. The schooner Alligator, on the one hand, and not to be trusted Cantain Cook, left Hongkong for Shangai on with it on the other. The words we have marked in italies constitute the fallacy of this definition. No such heresy has ever been maintained, at least during the present century, either in Downing-street or elsewhere. On the contrary, it has been uniformly conceded, by statesmen of all parties, that British colonies are fit, and can be trusted, with so much selfgovernment as is indispensably necessary or their welfare and advancement whole question has turned upon what is, and what is not, under the peculiar circumstances of any given colony, really necessary to their own interests. Into this fore that at the first there was no want of reasonable and probable cause. hose of loyalty and affection towards the nother country, must, in the eyes of practical statesmen, obviously enter-such as whether the colony be sufficiently populous, sufficiently intelligent, sufficiently concentrated, sufficiently at leisure. A colony, for example, of five thousand notouneducated men, scattered over an area of one thousand square miles, and compelled to work hard and incessantly for the bare necessaries of life, would not be very fit for the high trust and onerous labours of what is called "self-govern-

Our papers are to the 14th January, but there is nothing worthy of particular notice. Our Van Diemen's Land contemporaries are always dealing in the narvellous: for some time they were confident as to who was to be the sucessor of Sir GEORGE GIPPS in the government of this colony. The proposed foundation of a new colony has given nother field for their imagination; the exiles, whose arrival has created so much excitement in the southern district of this colony, are at once to be formed, so say the Van Diemen's Land papers, into a militia to guard our frontiers; one of the latest efforts, however, is the fol-lowing, from the Colonial Times of Janu-

lowing, from the Colonial Times of January 14th:—
We have the pleasure to announce to the public, that an Act of Council has passed at Sydney, fixing the rate of interest of money at six POUNDS PER CRATUR PER ANNUM. The Banks have reduced the interest of discounts, cash credits, and mortgages, to that ratio accordingly. It has given general satisfaction; the only objection to the before introduced Act being, that it was retrospective. Trade has considerably revived, in consequence of this judicious measure.

PORT PHILLIP. THE Port Phillip papers contain little of interest, the principal topic of discussion is the appointment of Mr. Therry to the Resident Judgeship. The Port Phillippians appear to be very sore on the point, nor does His Honor Mr. Justice JEFFCOTT appear altogether satisfied. The Herald appear altogether satisfied. The Herald, of January 14, says—Yesterday, at twelve o clock, a deputation composed of his Worship the Mayor, the Crown Prosecutor, the Chief Commissioner of the Insolvent Court, A. Cunningham, Esq., E. Curr, Esq., Redmond Barry, Esq., and James Graham, Esq., waited upon his Honor the Resident Judge, to request his Honor, in consequence of the high esteem and veneration he is held in by his bar, the magistracy, and indeed by all classes of Her Majesty's subjects in the province, to partake, prior to his departure from our shores, of a public dinner. His Honor received the deputation with that urbanity for which he is proverbial; and, in reply to their kind and urgent solicitation to participate in any demonstration of a public character stated, evidently labouring at the time under the deepest emotion, that until he saw his successor gazetted, and he himself descended to the rank of a private individual amongst them, he must decline their very kind invitation, but an invite of which he would be proud to avail himself at another time.

This was an action of ejectment tried during the last nisi prius sittings, before His Honor the Chief Justice, when a verdict was returned for the plaintiff. The present motion was for a nonsuitor a new trial, on the following grounds. First, that the plaintiff had failed to make out his title by proving a due levied by the Sheriff, from whom the lessor of the plaintiff derived his title; sesondly, that before the Sheriff made his levy the writ of s. fs. under which that levy purported to have been made had expired; thirdly, that the plaintiff had wholly failed to make out the identity of the lands sold by the Sheriff with those claimed by the present action; fourthly, that a grant from the Crown to the defendant had issued subsequent to the sale and previous to the conveyance by the Sheriff to the lessor of the plaintiff; fifthly, that the learned Judge had improperly received in evidence a memorandum from one Taylor, the attorney for the plaintiff in a previous action against O'Brien, purporting to be a direction to the Sheriff relative to the sale of the lands. Other points upon which the motion was founded were—that the verdict was against evidence, and that there had been a misdirection on the part of the Chief Justice in his address to the Jury.

Mesers. Broadhurst and Darvall appeared in support of the motion, and addressed the Court at considerable length, relying principally on the ground that the sale had taken place after the term of the writ had expired, and arguing that the sale must have consequently been nugatory.

Mesars. Foster and Winderer appeared in support of the verdict, and contended that the sale was a legal one; arguing that as the Sheriff was a public officer, credit must be given to him of having done all that was necessary and proper in the performance of his duty. It was likewise urged that the recital in the Sheriff's conveyance which was relied upon as showing the informality of the sale was erroneous, and that the introduction of the words "on or about," when speaking of the

DYER C. PEEK.

This was an action for malicious prosecution tried during the last nisi prius sittings before his Honor the Chief Justice and a Special Jury, when a verdict was returned for the plaintiff, when a verdict was returned for the plaintin, damages £40

The present application was for a nonsuit or new trial, upon the grounds that the verdict was against evidence, against the direction of the Chief Justice, and against law. These grounds rested principally upon the fact that the Chief Justice had told the Jury that there was an existence of a reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution, notwithstanding which direction they had found for the plaintiff. Mr. Fosten, in support of the motion, contended that the learned Judge was quite right in assuming that there had been an existence of a reasonable and probable cause for this prosecution out of which this action had arisen, for that prosecution having originated out of a secution out of which this action had arisen, for that prosecution having originated out of a payment of £4 8s. 4d to Mrs. Rowell, which had not been entered by the plaintiff, had broken down, merely because Mrs. Rowell could not swear whether she had paid it on the Priday or on the Saturday, as, if it had been on the latter day after six o'clock in the evening, it could not have been booked, and there would have been no grounds for the prosecution. Of this fact, however, the defendant was not aware, until the time of the examination at the Police Office; and it was clear therefore that at the first there was no want of reasonable and probable cause.

Mr. Wyndrym supported the verdict, contending that the Chief Justice had been in error when he assumed an existence of reasonable and probable cause for the prosecution, and that the Jury was fully justified in drawing an opposite conclusion. The learned gentleman then proceeded to refer to the evidence adduced to the time of the trial, to show that from the at the time of the trial, to show that from the information of Mrs. Rowell herself, he must

THE SYDNEY THIEVES .- Since Saturday night The Sydney Thirkyrs.—Since Saturday night the most active officers in the Sydney poince have been almost incessantly engaged in ferretting out a gang of thieves, who have for the last two years been concerned in most of the burglaries that have been committed in the city. Five or six of the principals are already in custody, and will as a matter of course be brought before the Police Court when their yachts, if the funds will admit of it.

brought before the Police Court when their companions are secured.

Forgress.—A great number of forged cheques, orders, bills, and other mometary documents, have been put in circulation in Sydney and its vicinity within the last week by draymen and cart-drivers from the roads. In almost every case the publicans have been the sufferers.

Human Remains.—The lower portion of the body of an adult female, was found on Monday morning, on the beach at Lane Cove. The shoes and stockings on it have enabled the inhabitants of the neighboorhood where it was found, to identify it as the body of a woman who was accidentally drowned there about ten days ago, by the upsetting of a boat in which she, a man and a child, were passing from Sydney, the two latter were saved, but she sank before assistance arrived.

Sir,—I take the liberty of informing you, that it has been industriously circulated in this neighbourhood, that you sent for a person (who lately obtained a publican's license) to attend you at your own residence, and endeavoured to prevail on him to lodge an information, which you had, of your own accord, drawn out for him, and that you subsequently endeavoured to prevail on him to take out a summons or warrant against me, which the party, Thomas Howarth, would not consent to I make this communication, with the bope and expectation that you will, by a written reply, enable me effectually to contradict the above aspercion on your character as a Magistrate, which I am confident from the courtesy and urbanity you have always exhibited towards myself, as well as your own sense of that even-handed and impartial administration of justice which should ever characteries the acts of a magistrate, as well as what is due to yourself as a gentleman, will enable you to supply me with a decided contradiction, and thus allence those whe have circulated a report so derogatory to the character of a dispenser of justice.

committed by the bench to take her trial for having stolen property in her possession.

Assaulting the Police.—An old man named George Ross was sentenced to pay a fine of 40s., or be imprisoned for one mouth, for assaulting Chief Constable Ryan. Prisoner was drunk, and had been much illused by a soldier, when the Chief Constable coming up, was about to lead him home; but the prisoner, thinking that he was to be taken into custody, made a great resistance, and struck Ryan several times.

IMPOUNDING ACT .- William Reynolds, INFOUNDING ACT.—William Reynolds, a milkman residing in Argyle-street, was on Thursday last sentenced to pay a fine of £5 ls. with costs, for impounding two head of cattle, the property of Michael Lynch, and charging two shillings a head damages on them, the paidock whence they were impounded not being secured by a good and substantial fence. The case was defended by Mr. Lyons, who gave notice of appeal.

The case was defended by Mr. Lyons, who gave notice of appeal.

DESTITETION:—A woman named Mary Dundas was brought before the Police Bench on Saturday, charged with sleeping under the verandsh of Mr. Tapp's house. The constable had seen her sitting there at midnight, and had not sleep the asset when she said that she had no place to go to, and had not slept in a house for the last week. The Chief Constable said, that he had spoken to her about laisteine.

no place to go to, and had not slept in a house for the last week. The Chief Constable said, that he had spoken to her about loitering bout, and she replied, that she wished she was but into garl, for she could do nothing for streelf. The Bench sentenced her to two months' confinement in the third class of the Female Factory.

High Sunvants' Act.—Mr. Lyons appeared of Saurday last, on behalf of Mr. Mark Riddelf Tomkins, to answer the complaint of William Hughes for not paying him his wages, due to him for serving Mr. Tomkins as a miller at the Hawke-bury River. The disputed amount was for the price of the rations of complainant's wife, which the defendant had docked from complainant's wages, although it was understood in the agreement that the whole family were to be rationed. From want of evidence the bench were compelled to dismiss the case; observing, at the same time, that there was something mysterious in the manner in which Mr. Tomkins treated his men, as complaints were often made to the bench by men who had been dismissed without actie. that there was something mysterious in the manner in which Mr. Tomkins treated his men, as complaints were often made to the beach by men who had been dismissed without a settlement, and some short time back no less than nine men had come with the same complaint; and as there appeared to be something wrong, they would willingly sit for any number of hours longer if they thought they could arrive at the truth. Immediately afterwards, Mr. Asterly, an overseer or employe of Mr. Tomkins, gave Hughes into custody for stealing a book, which book, it was alleged, had been taken from a box with some others, and had been sold by Hughes to a young man named Byrnes; but, as on the examination it appeared that the book was claimed by two or three parties, in their asxiety to accuse Hughes, the case was dismissed by the Bench.

Anorther Still.—A complete still was found on Friday last in the creek at the rear of the premises of Mr. Benson, publican, of Church-street. It was in full work at the time.

The two scoundrels who have so long annoyed the residents on the Lower Murrumbidgee, are at length apprehended. Two of our Commissioners (Beckham's) troopers passed here with them, in custody, a few days back. Too much credit cannot be accorded to these men for their untiring perseverance in pursuance of these villains, and the circumstances of the capture redeems, to a great extent, the general character of the border police for apathy and want of energy. The two troopers in question followed the robbers many hundred miles, and came upon them at the junction of the Lachlan with the Murrumbidgee. They were in company with about 400 wild dred miles, and came upon them at the junction of the Lachlan with the Murrumbidgee. They were in company with about 400 wild blacks who decamped with a "sauce qui peut," so soon as the carbines made their appearance. The fellows had a number of cattle with them, and were regaling the aboriginals with fresh beef daily, as their wants demanded. This would appear to be in order to quiet the savages, and induce them to consent to their departure, they being our route to Adelaide. It was very questionable policy however. The police took three horses from them, belonging to Messra. Oakes and Dallas. The cattle printering to the same of the

Mr. Wali, Curator of the Sydney Museum

Mr. Wali, Curator of the Sydney Museum, has been some time in our neighbourhood, collecting specimens in ornithology, and has sacceeded in classing many new species, as well as a testablishing some interesting distinctions between well-known varieties of this district, and birds of the same class inhabiting other parts of the country. There is a wide field open for the naturalist in this splendid part of the country, and Mr. Wall has roamed it and gleaned its curiosities with untiring exertion.

The weather has undergone a vast change here since yesterday, up to which period it had been suffocatingly hot. Last evening a strong north-west gale set in, which veered round to south-west towards night, and was accompanied by some towards night, and was accompanied to a contract of the period of the year, and the wind is all round the compass, and rain is very badly wanted here now. The showers last night I hope have extinguished the bush fires, as no smoke obscures the atmosphere to-day.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

THE SQUATTERS.

THE SQUATTERS.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald, Gentleman,—It is impossible for any one having the least interest in the colony to be otherwise than affected by the football position of the unfortunate squatters of New South Wales; well may it be hoped that Mr. Boyd, in his interview with Lord Stanley, has struck on the chord of merey.

Whilst the powerful battery, so skilfully and silently raised under the secret labour of midnight, by our terrible engineer, is in full play on the citade (bark hats), a combined operation of sappers and miners has commenced covertly to cut off every tenth of their supporters. In charity I would fain exclaim—Heaven protect them! but I have no intention of condoling with "A Suffering Squatter," or to discuss thimble-rig operations, for I believe nothing but the taunts of their fellow-men can arouse the squatters to active measures, and unitedly to assert, protect, and maintain the dignity of their position among Her Majesty's subjects in these colonies. Shall I say their supineness and want of spirit merits the treatment, the contempt they meet with—that they deserve not to have a feather left. "Pull D, pull B, is a most vulgar sdage. The quiet observer can now see that it is pull Governor, pull Bankers, pull Merchants, pull Brokers—and all ye little "seceders" assist to pull—pull away—pull away—each seize boldly your tenth fleece—best down the heavily laden bee and rob him of the fruits of his labour, and desire him to collect more against the return of your appetites.

A Suffering Squatter's complaint of losing a tenth of his produce is just enough; but will his brethren assist to remedy the evil? No—it will be borne. Will his friends come to his assistance? Alas, he has none—the lion will take them all separately. I, with others, have endured the consequences of quiet submission; thrown out of her old class—the third—because of her very slight excess of tonnage, and at the same time she is not fit to be entered in the second. Now, I think it is too bad to make such a rule as this, and just before the Regatta too; and that a fourth-class match, at least for the present year, be got up. The third-class boats will then belong to that class, and those, of which there are four or five, sufficient for a race, be entered as the third class. This I consider would only be making reparation to those persons who.

as the third class. This I consider would only be making reparation to those persons who, like myself, will have their boats thrown out of race altogether by this new rule.

Hoping that you will oblige me, a subscriber to your valuable paper, with the insertion of these few lines, at your convenience, I remain, Geutlemen, A BOAT OWNER. Grogge-street, January 17.

COOLIES.

To the Settlers of New South Wales.

(Per favour of the System Merning Heroid.)
GENTLEMEN, — Recollect immigration has ceased; in a few months labour will be scarce and dear, I mean labour suited to your wants. You have now plenty of time to send to India for Coolies, who will arrive before next harvest and shearing. Neglect this warning and be ruined; you never can pay higher wages than you are now doing; and as there are no funds to bring out our starving countrymen, adopt the next best course—import Coolies!!

ONE OF YOURSELVES. COOLIES.

conjecture that the late meteor had propelled a stone to the earth, and that it fell very near to me. There is now sufficient evidence to abandon the idea so far as relates to its proximity, and I now feel certain that the noise, which resembled the report of a distant cannon (not a crash), was that of the explosion, which, without question, reached me in the space of two or three minutes. I will now proceed to show that this might be the case, notwithstanding the meteor may have been a thousand miles off in reality, although apparently a very limited distance. In order to prove this, it is necessary, in the first; lace, to abandon the theory of acoustics, as far as it may relate to heavenly bodies. It will not be necessary to assert, that the experiments thereon must have been conducted in the dense atmosphere immediately in contact with the earth, and on a very limited scale; nor is it going too far to assert, that the the experiments thereon must have been conducted in the dense atmosphere immediately in contact with the earth, and on a very limited scale; nor is it going too far to assert, that the same laws will not apply to an atmosphere of infinitely greater rarity, any more than it does to sounds produced under water, which travel far slower than those in the air above it. It must, therefore, be conceded that every strata of air (being of different degrees of rarity) between the earth and the meteor, must have given a different velocity to the sound passing through them; and hence the sound of the explosion of the late meteor might have reached me in the space of time I have stated. If we be regulated by the experiments on sound, it would have occupied nearly an hour and a half to reach the earth.

I will now endeavour to investigate the cause of the meteor having been observed by different spectators at points eighty miles asunder, to have exploded to the northward: and here the science of mathematics will fail unless assisted by that of optics.

I will here premise, that all bodies presented to our view in the heavens must be seen through a variety of media, each medium determined by fixed surfaces, similar to the junction of water and air, and every medium reflecting the light from its surface at a different angle, according to its expanded proportion; the meteor, therefore, passing in its domencard course through different media, each beholder would see it under different circumstances, and hence the spectator at the South Head might see the explosion in the north, whilst it occurred many degrees south of that northern point presented to him; and this difference would depend probably on the number of surfaces through which the rays of light would have to pass. I will now trace the delusion of sight to the same cause as that producing sound; and in order to render my observations clear to the general reader, I will suppose a rod to be thrust into still water—the act of doing so will agitate the water, and the rod wil missing sound or the metsor, would agitate the sir and produce an infinite number of circles; and these circles would form with great rapidity near the meteor, and gradually become slower as they became more extended. Now, as every circle assists to convey sound, it follows, that the first circles would convey it more rapidly than the last. (And this will show clearly, that the theory of acoustics must vary under every circumstance and degree of rarity of air, and especially when applied to the atmosphere at enormous elevations; and this is the more evident, from the fact of the experiments thereon varying in their results, owing, no doubt, to their having been made unfer different influences of the atmosphere) Sight also would be acted on by these circles forming the light into angles, and producing an optical delusion, which can be better and more practically explained, by the reader endeavouring to shoot a fish below the surface of the water. This optical delusion would be rendered more complete by the acceptance of both theories, that is, the one of existing media, and the latter of circles produced by sound.

From the foregoing observations, it will be seen how extremely difficult it must be to make any satisfactory calculations on flying and erraric bodies like meteors, and that human science must necessarily fail when applied to such a subject, owing to that science being based upon a theory which we possess so limited means of testing—unless, indeed, the present meteor has given data whereon to correct the existing laws in acoustics, as inapplicable to sounds produced at great altitudes; and in the hands of a really scientific man, as W. B. C., this correction may be made; for he may rest satisfied, that no period longer than two or three minutes elapsed between the explosion and the sound, and taking the meteor to have been a thousand miles distant, (which housesers I acceptance) than two or three minutes elaps. 4 between the explosion and the sound, and taking the meteor to have been a thousand miles distant, (which, however, I am inclined to doubt, though it may have been generated at that height), we have here presented to us two essential points to assist in the correction. I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant, A SETTLER.

essential points to assist in the correction.

I am, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,
A SETTLER.
P.S. The following is copied from an old paper:—"Transmission of sound.—The longest interval yet observed between the production of sound and its transmission to the ear, was in the case of the meteor of 1783, the report of which was heard at Windsor Castle ten minutes after its disappearance. Allowing the velocity of sound at twelve and a quarter miles per minute, the distance traversed in that case must have been 1274 miles."

If any observation of the height of this meteor is on record, it might help to clear up any doubts respecting the time of transmitting sounds from elevated points of the atmosphere.
Perhaps this meteor exploded at a distance of 5000 miles from the earth.
In confirmation of my belief that only two or three minutes elapsed between the explosion and sound of the meteor, I may add, that I was riding at a walking pace, and could by no accident have passed over more than one hundred and fifty yards. I beg to add, that as this letter will exhibit my ignorance of all scientific knowledge, I must beg the indulgence of the reader for all absurdities that may appear therein.
